The next three activities focus mainly on exposure to the shape of the letter in addition to associating it with words that start with the letter to create a relation between shape and sound.

- King K: On a piece of paper, draw or print out the letter K. On a separate piece of paper, draw the shape of a crown and have your child decorate it with plastic craft jewels or sequins. Then, cut the crown and have your child glue it onto the letter K to make it the king.
- Kite Cutout: For this activity, you'll need to draw or print a kite on a piece of paper. From a separate piece of paper or cardboard, cut out the shape of the letter K. Now have your child glue the letter K to look like the bows on the string of the kite.

- Key Prints: To complete this activity, all you'll need is a big letter K on a piece of cardboard, a key and some paint. Let your child make a mess by dipping the key into some paint and stamping it all over the letter K.

You can implement one of the above activities everyday for a week and your preschooler will be good to go concerning the letter K.
